You have £100 left for the next two weeks after paying your bills. Your friends want to go out for dinner, see a concert, and go on a day trip.

Which activities would you choose to do and how would you keep up with your social life on a tight budget?

You have £200 to spare this month! There are a few things you could spend it on:

- You need a new winter coat (£90)
- A present for your friend's birthday (£35)
- Join your friends on a weekend away(£150)
- A new game you want (£50)
- Put some (£75) into savings for a summer holiday

How do you decide to spend your money? What are your needs versus your wants?

Can you name some examples of essential expenses?

Would you rather...
Have an unlimited gym membership OR a Hello Fresh subscription?

What would you do if you only had £25 to spend on food for two weeks?

Would you rather...
Have a Spotify OR Netflix subscription?

What are examples of essential expenses?

How much do you spend a month on social activities (e.g. eating out, cinema tickets, going to events etc)?

What would you do if you went out for dinner with a friend who promised to pay you back, but then didn't?
